

The Folded Paper Problem

A large piece of paper, the thickness of a piece of loose leaf paper, is folded once, making two layers. It is folded again, making four layers. If you were to continue to fold it over upon itself fifty times, how thick is the fifty-times folded paper?